Kraft Foods Global, Inc., et al.*, 07 C 1954 (doc. # 63) is DENIED; (2) the Piro plaintiffs' motion to consolidate the Piro and George cases and for appointment of co-lead counsel (doc. # 18) is GRANTED in part and DENIED in part, as summarized below; and (3) pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(2), the Court appoints Jerome J. Schlichter, Elizabeth J. Hubertz and the law firm of Schlichter, Bogard & Denton as interim lead counsel for the putative class in the consolidated George and Piro cases. Separate dockets shall continue to be maintained for each of the individual actions, and all filings shall be entered on the docket of each of the individual actions. STATEMENT

The dueling motions that the George and Piro plaintiffs have filed for stay and for consolidation/appointment of co-lead counsel reflect their dispute about who should be at the helm of these ERISA lawsuits for the plaintiffs. However, what all plaintiffs (as well as the defendants) agree upon is the proposition that these lawsuits should be managed in a way to avoid unnecessary duplication of effort by all parties – and the Court. For the reasons stated on the record, we conclude that this salutary goal can be best achieved by consolidating the cases. The two complaints name the same defendants (while Piro names 10 Doe defendants, they add nothing to the allegations) the complaints allege the same causes of action; and the complaints seek the same remedies. The class asserted in Piro is subsumed within, and is not inconsistent with, the class asserted in George. Moreover, while George was filed nearly six months before Piro, discovery has not substantially proceeded yet in George. Thus, consolidation will not delay the ultimate disposition of the George case. By contrast, a stay of the Piro case pending a decision on class certification (which counsel in George propose) could lead to duplicative proceedings: if class certification were denied in George, for example, the Piro plaintiffs then would be free to seek class certification in their separate suit.

For these reasons, we agree with the Piro plaintiffs that consolidation is appropriate under Fed. R. Civ. P. 42(a). We therefore order that the George and Piro cases be consolidated. However, at least pending the Court's ruling on class certification, separate dockets shall continue to be maintained for each of the individual actions, and all filings shall be entered on the docket of each of the individual actions.

STATEMENT

We part company with the Piro plaintiffs when they suggest that their attorneys should act as interim co-lead counsel for the putative class with the attorneys in the George case. The submissions by counsel for the George plaintiffs amply demonstrate that they more than meet the requirements imposed by Fed. R. Civ. P. 23(g)(1) to qualify for class counsel: they can fairly and adequately represent the class; they are knowledgeable and experienced in complex litigation; they have devoted substantial resources to investigating and identifying the claims asserted in this action; and they have the resources to vigorously represent the putative class. Indeed, counsel for the Piro plaintiffs tacitly acknowledged the quality of the work by the George counsel by liberally borrowing from the George complaint when drafting their own. And, counsel for Piro candidly acknowledged in open court that counsel for the George plaintiffs were up to the task of litigating this case, and that he had no criticism of what George counsel has done in litigating the case thus far.

Counsel for Piro has not identified any need for addition lead counsel, or any value that they would add as co-lead counsel. Rather, it appears that counsel for Piro seeks to be co-lead counsel to make sure, as Piro counsel put it, that they are not “cut out” of the case. We find that this is an insufficient basis to impose a co-lead counsel relationship upon the George and Piro counsel that does not advance the interests of the putative class; that George counsel does not want; and that we envision would lead to needless dispute and increased costs.

Thus, we deny the motion by Piro counsel to be named co-lead counsel with George counsel for the putative class in the consolidated actions. Pursuant to Rule 23(g)(2), we appoint Jerome J. Schlichter, Elizabeth J. Hubertz and the law firm of Schlichter, Bogard & Denton as interim lead counsel for the putative class in the consolidated George and Piro cases. Of course, as all parties recognize, Piro counsel remain counsel of record for the two named plaintiffs in the Piro case, and will have the right to attend and participate in any depositions that might be taken. Piro counsel also may suggest courses of action to interim lead counsel. However, interim lead counsel will have the sole responsibility for all discovery, motion practice, settlement and strategy decisions in pursuit of the consolidated cases.
